Environmental health and nursing: Focus on rural Pennsylvania. (2008). Funded by Health Care without Harm.

This funded proposal supports a program to discuss environmental health issues, building on a similar conference held in September 2007. The conference focuses on the issues salient to rural central PA, such as watershed, radon, and mining-related environmental health risks. In addition to raising awareness about environmental health issues in home, community and work settings, we hope to forge partnerships between nurses in community health, acute care, schools, and SON nursing programs.
