Everyone has a job to do.

There are a lot of new rules lately because of germs. When you follow these new rules, you help keep yourself and other people safe.

Even if you feel healthy, you can give someone else germs by mistake. Your job is to do these things:

- Wear a mask when you’re not at home. A mask can keep you from accidentally making other people sick.
- Stay apart from people you don’t live with. If you put your arms out like a T and can touch someone, you are too close.
- Wash your hands a lot. Germs can live on your hands and things you touch. Soap and water kill germs so you don’t catch or spread them.
