Geisinger College of Health Sciences

Our Approach to Admissions

At Geisinger College of Health Sciences, our admissions processes for the Schools of Medicine, Nursing, and Graduate Education are rooted in a mission-aligned selection philosophy. We define merit not solely by academic metrics, but by a comprehensive evaluation of each applicant's competencies, attributes, and experiences that best reflect our institutional goals and commitment to advancing health in the communities we serve.

We take an individualized approach to reviewing applications. This means we consider each applicant's academic achievements, test scores, life experiences, interviews, and personal context to understand their full potential. We look for candidates prepared to thrive in our rigorous learning environment and who demonstrate a strong commitment to service, innovation, and leadership in healthcare.
