GHP is known for excellence and innovation in integrated care and coverage. Now, we're working with MedInsight, powered by Milliman, to lead the way in successful health plan reporting and management.

Why am I receiving this guide?

You're receiving this walk-through guide because you have successfully completed our MedInsight user request form and now have access to your client's reporting. This will help to walk you through how to access your client's reports as well as any troubleshooting issues you might have at the beginning. We're excited to welcome you to your client's new reporting hub!

What clients are eligible for enhanced reporting from MedInsight?

If you have a fully insured client with 100+ subscribers or a traditional self-funded client, you are eligible to receive reporting from MedInsight. Currently, Geisinger Funding Alternative (GFA) level-funded groups are not eligible.

How do I get access to my client's reporting?

Since your MedInsight user registration is completed, you should have received an email prompting you to enroll and set up your multi-factor authentication (MFA) credentials, also called DUO. Once your accounts are enabled for multi-factor authentication, you must complete the self-registration process before you will be allowed access any portal environment.

About the self-registration process

The self-registration process is how the system knows where to send the second authentication request. Once your account has been enabled for DUO MFA, you will need to successfully log on to any portal environment you would normally have access to.

Simply follow the instructions on the screen to complete the registration process. Multi-factor authentication will remember your computer/browser for 14 days for connections to the portal environment as long as users select the option to do so.

It is important to set up your initial account within five days of receiving your registration email. Failure to do so will cause your account to be disabled. In this case, reach out to your client services representative to request your account to be re-enabled.

Having trouble? Try this:

• Disabled login

Lack of login activity will cause your account to be disabled. Logging into the MedInsight portal every few weeks will keep your account active. If you have not logged in for over 30 days and are having login issues, this is likely due to your account being auto-disabled due to lack of activity. Your client services representative can help renew your access.

• Expired password

Look for email notifications regarding password expiration. Please change your password promptly when you receive these notifications. Again, failure to do this can cause your account to be auto-disabled and require you to request reauthorization. Your client services representative can get you reauthorized.

• Exceeded login attempts

Sometimes your Internet browser will hold on to prior login attempts and may cause issues with logging in. When troubleshooting login issues, the following process often takes care of things, assuming your account has not been disabled for the reasons above.

- Close out ALL browsers open on your computer. If you can, restarting your computer first can help.
 - With the browser window open, hit CTRL + F5 to clear the browser's cache,
 - Open a new browser window, PASTE the URL link for your group from the previous article into the web address bar (don't use a saved favorite at this point), and log in as normal.
